

Hekla fire box

Gives off a lot of heat – takes up little space

Our fire box, Hekla, gives off little smoke but a lot of heat which means it is easy to cook food on it or you can simply enjoy the heat and light from its open fire.

The fire box is indispensable if you are going to build a fire on snow. The metal rods at the bottom of the box can be placed on branches or other support material on the snow, thereby preventing the fire box from sinking into the snow.

Its clever design means that it takes up very little space when packed.

Hekla fire box stand

Lawns, sensitive forestland or stone slabs are effectively protected from scorching and on snow, the stand prevents the firebox from sinking because of the heat. It also prevents Hekla 30 from tipping over when the grate (accessory for Hekla 30) is used as a protruding shelf for keeping food warm.

The tent floor must always be folded away even when the fire box stand is used.
